Mumbai: Three of the Big Four — Deloitte, KPMG and PwC — are in a close race to buy BMR Advisors, India's best known boutique tax firm, or at least, separate parts of the firm. Serious negotiations are on since the past few weeks and the three major professional services firms have put in their offers, according to multiple sources connected with the deal. Though — conversations

Interestingly, two of the BMR founding partners – Bobby Parikh and Mukesh Butani – are not part of any discussions. Sources say Parikh will most likely retire post the transaction and ted with the deal.

Though conversations started for the entire firm initially but of late two groups of partners have been negotiating separately with suitors to pursue independent deals. The tax team, comprising both direct and indirect tax partners, is being led by BMR co-founder Rajeev Dimri and Gokul Chaudhuri while Rohit Berry is holding talks for the M&A, corporate finance and risk advisory team. According to the last known conversations, the Rohit Berry group was leaning towards KPMG, while the tax team led was seriously considering the Deloit tenter offer. A detailed questionnaire sent to BMR, KPMG, Deloitte and PwC did not elicit any response till the time of going to press.

Insiders said the PWC offerwas also on the table and still being discussed actively BMR partners met on Saturday and Sunday to discuss the offers.

Internally, a message has been delivered that by the hend of this month, the transaction will be closed. Sources say the BMR partners have been offered up to 30% jump in their current salaries and a 100% joining bonus amount over and abonus amount over and abo Butani will set up an independent law practice.

Initially, segotiations started with KPMG but then the two other firms also joined the fray. "BMR has a profitable business with a high quality talent pool. This deal can be a win-win for both sides," said one of the persons involved in the deal.

the persons involved in the deal.

BMR currently has 25 partners with 15 in tax. Sopartners with 15 in tax. Sources close to the transaction peg BMR revenues anywhere between Rs 220 and 240 crore.

"Tax is one of the most profitable practices for any Big four. Only thing that hinder sgrowth in tax is shortage of quality talent. Also, in tax, many clients tend to move with their advisors. So this deal will be value acrective to any of the big firms," said Sunil Chandiramani, ex-leader of EY's advisory practice.

Two years back, KPMG had entered into negotiations to buy BMR but the talks failed due to valuation differences and role and reporting structure related issues.

BMR has been under pres-portingstructure related issues.

BMR has been under pressure because of increasing dominance of the Big Four, loss of key talent, and rising costs. Increasingly, the firm was faced with a situation where the Big Four firms were picking teams regularly, while scale and wider bouquet of services offered by full service firms was becoming a challenge. Margins were also dropping. So, the partners had to decide on the future course of business.

ping, so, the partners and to decide on the future course of business. Recently, BMR legal, a sister firm run by Butani, recently lost its entire transaction and capital markets team to Shardul Amarchand Mangaldas. BMR was started in 2004 by ex-Arthur Andersen partners, Bobby Parikh, Mukesh Butani and Rajeev Dimri, who had joined from Ernst and Young (now EY). Arthur Andersen had to wind up in 2001-02 in the wake of the Enron collapse. The India team under Parikh's leadership had joined EY but in many other geographies Andersen tax teams joined Deloitte. The tax practice has been a lucrative business for the Big Four with a combined usiness north of $3000 crore.

big Four with a combined business north of ₹3000 crore. Firms are lining up for BMRas its tax team is considered a high quality practice. EY is market leader in tax followed by PwC hogging 35% of the pie. KPMG tax practice was hit when industry stalwart Dinesh Kanabar leff with his team to start Dhruva Advisors, and Deloitte has the smallest but fastest growing tax practice, so an acquisition like BMR tax team would lift its game exponentially. "It will be interesting to see what happens. Two years back, there was a good deal when KPMG was speaking to BMR. They have lost callent in the last two years. So, now the two sets of teams sitting in different firms will fight for work," said a tax expert.
